

Patent War

Innovators vs Chors vs Patent Office

Dr. Ayush Kumar Agrawal

UPES

Welcome to the Battle

Today we divide the class into three powerful kingdoms:

- Team Innovators: Smart creators
- Team Chors: Professional copy machines
- Team Patent Office: Calm judges who decide everything

Get ready for chaos and comedy.

Rules of the War

1. Innovators invent something in 2 minutes.
2. Chors must copy it but change one funny detail.
3. Patent Office will approve, reject, or delay.

Everything must be presented with full dramatic effect.

Invent a strange product that is new and creative. Sample ideas:

- Maggi making helmet
- AI powered pillow that gives advice
- Automatic attendance marking shoes

Use your imagination. Invent anything.

Your job is simple. Copy everything. But change only one detail. Examples:

- Change color of the design
- Add a useless extra switch
- Rename it in a funny way

Act confident. Pretend it is original.

Patent Office Mission

You are the supreme authority. You decide the fate of all inventions. You can:

- Approve the patent
- Reject with a funny reason
- Delay approval to maintain suspense

Make your decisions dramatic but logical.

Each group presents their invention. Chors present their copy. Patent Office delivers verdict. Audience laughs, claps, judges.

This activity gives no marks. It gives fun, creativity, teamwork, and learning. Awards you can give:

- Best Inventor
- Smartest Chor
- Most dramatic Patent Officer

Learning Outcome

After the war students understand:

- What a patent protects
- What copying means in real world
- How patents are examined

Learning through laughter.

Create. Copy. Judge. Repeat. The patent war ends here.
